4. (Internal Use Only - JGO) I talked to Mrs. Angie Morris, Senate Foreign Relations Committee staff, and received from her the Pincus and Paul itinerary for the Far East trip beginning 25 June. Mrs. Morris advised that she would forward a detailed itinerary when it is completed later today or tomorrow.

5. (Secret - JGO) Talked to Mr. Frank Hand, OSD Liaison, at various times during the day concerning Agency and DOD review of the DCI/Laird transcript of testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Monday, 23 June. Late in the day an appointment was made by Bruce Clarke, OSR, to meet with Bill Baroody and Tom Brooke, of the Secretary of Defense's office, at 2:00 p.m. tomorrow for possible final review of the transcript. (See Memorandum for the Record.)

6. (Secret - JGO) The transcript of the Director's testimony before the Gore Subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on 23 April was forwarded to the Committee together with two copies of the DCI/Laird transcript of Monday, 23 June. Copy No. 3 of the 23rd of June transcript was retained for Agency use.

Sen John Helms

20 JUN 1969

LAIRD AND HELMS DUE QUIZZING

They Are Called Before
Senate Committee

By NATHAN MILLER

[Washington Bureau of The Sun]

Washington, June 19—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has called Melvin R. Laird, Secretary of Defense, and Richard Helms, chief of the central Intelligence Agency, to testify Monday about discrepancies in their views of Soviet offensive capability.

At issue is what is contended to be a basic disagreement within the administration over whether the Russians are trying for a "first strike" nuclear capability.

Senator J. William Fulbright (D., Ark.), committee chairman, reluctantly agreed to hear the two ranking officials in tandem only at the strong insistence of Mr. Laird.

The chairman had wanted to question them in separate meetings, apparently with the aim of cross-checking their views. There has been no public announcement of the meeting, to be held behind closed doors.

The question of whether or not the Russians are trying for a "first strike" capability—the ability to destroy American missiles before they can be fired—is central to the decision to build an anti-ballistic missile system.

"No Doubt About That"

Mr. Laird, testifying March 21 in support of President Nixon's decision to deploy the Safeguard anti-ballistic missile system, said the Soviet Union is going for our missiles and there is no doubt about that.

But an unpublished committee staff study contends the United States Intelligence board, comprised of the top security agencies and headed by Mr. Helms, has not concluded that the Soviet SS-9 missile was deployed to develop a first-strike capability.

Deployment by the Russians of 200 SS-9 missiles, each capable of carrying a 20-to-25-megaton warhead, is one of the key reasons advanced by Secretary Laird for the decision to build the ABM. It is designed to protect United States missile

The staff study, said to be based for the most part on information given the committee by Mr. Helms, said United States intelligence agencies have known about the SS-9 for years and the latest estimates indicate that the Russians have slowed deployment of the missile rather than expanding deployment as contended by Mr. Laird.

On Tuesday, the committee decided at a closed meeting against releasing the report and voted instead to ask Mr. Laird to come before it to explain the differences between what he and other officials have been saying.

The document obviously was intended to counter the campaign being waged in the Senate by the administration for approval of the ABM. While the margin is close in the entire body, a bipartisan majority of the committee is opposed to deployment.

"This is a shrewd move on Laird's part," said one source. "I'll bet they've got 300 guys down there working on the answers to any embarrassing questions."

Although Senator Fulbright was said to have opposed a tandem appearance of Secretary Laird and Mr. Helms, obviously fearing that an attempt would be made to paper over the alleged differences between them, he finally agreed to the Defense Secretary's demand last night.

Although steps were taken to inform the committee members of the decision, some of them were taken back when questions about it today. The consensus seemed to be that a joint appearance would not result in anything that was new.

Conversation between Mr. Carl Marcy, Senate Foreign Relations Committee staff, and Mr. John M. Maury -- 19 June 1969

Marcy: Thought we had better check to make sure things are on the track--10:30 Monday, the Director and Secretary Laird.

Maury: That is what I understand. Do you have any guidelines as to what should be covered?

Marcy: It would be best to take the 20 questions and amend them as required--that is update them if they need updating. You know this was Laird's idea. We wanted to talk with the Director privately. We never told Laird that. When Senator Fulbright went to Laird, Laird said he wanted an executive session with the Director and was so insistent that Senator Fulbright felt he should go along with it. We are interested in having those 20 questions, that is the answers to the 20 questions, updated and anything else the Director might want to bring up. It will be in Room S-116 in the Capitol and will be the full Committee.
Another thing--for some weeks Life Magazine has had "Okie", who was Johnson's photographer in the White House, on their payroll, doing a series of behind-the-scenes photography--he wants to take pictures while an executive session is going on.
We set up a session for him but he wants to be present when an important hearing is going on.

Maury: I'd have to check on that with the Director.

Marcy: Please do that--I can turn it off if you wish.

1. (Internal Use Only - CEA) Talked to Mrs. Dolores Eaton, in the office of Senator Howard Cannon (D., Nev.), concerning her previous call to the Department of State inquiring whether any of the Cubans who took part in the Bay of Pigs have received payment from the U.S. Government. Mrs. Eaton said she was not sure specifically what the constituent wanted and after checking with Senator Cannon it was decided that they would go back to the constituent for more information at which time they would determine whether they would request further information from us. In the meantime no further action is necessary.

2. (Unclassified - CEA) Mr. Borenstein, in the office of Representative Leonard Farbstein (D., N.Y.), called to inquire whether the Agency could furnish unclassified information on sales by the Yugoslavs to North Vietnam. I suggested to Mr. Borenstein that his best source for this information would be the Library of Congress.

3. (Secret - JGO) In response to a request from Mrs. Mary McLaughlin, Senate Foreign Relations Committee staff, the transcript of the Director's testimony of 23 April before the Gore Subcommittee was forwarded to the Committee for their use during the day. I later talked to Mrs. McLaughlin who advised, after checking with Mr. Marcy, that the Committee would need the transcript again tomorrow.

4. (Confidential - JGO) I talked to Mr. Frank Hand, OSD Liaison, concerning the DCI's appearance on Monday before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. I brought him up-to-date on Agency procedures for security control of the transcripts of the DCI's appearances before the Committee. Mr. Hand suggested that it might be well if these procedures were utilized for Monday's briefing and he advised that he would discuss the matter with Mr. Jack Stempler, Assistant to the Secretary of Defense for Legislative Affairs.

5. (Secret - JMM) Carl Marcy, Senate Foreign Relations Committee staff, called to confirm plans for the Director to appear before the Committee jointly with Secretary Laird at 10:30 A. M., Monday, 23 June, in room S-116 in the Capitol. Marcy said we should be prepared to review and if necessary update our answers to the "20 questions" levied on us at the Gore Subcommittee briefing on 23 April. Marcy asked if the Director would have any objection to the attendance of Okimoto, the Nisei former White House photographer now working for Life magazine, taking pictures at the briefing. I said I would check with the Director and call him back.

Later in the day, I talked with Marcy on the phone and he agreed to exclude Okimoto.

Marcy said Senator Fulbright was "getting a lot of flak" from the press over permitting Laird and Helms to appear jointly. He said the press was arguing that if Laird and Helms appeared jointly, then Rogers should also be included, and they were claiming that by hearing Laird and Helms jointly the Committee was guilty of mixing intelligence and policy by letting this go on and asking why Fulbright "folded up" under pressure from Laird on this issue. I told Marcy I would pass this on to the Director, but commented that no matter what we did the press would undoubtedly try to make something out of it.

25X1A 6. (Secret - GLC) [] OGC, and I met with Mr. Robert 25X1A Michaels, on the staff of the House Appropriations Committee, to discuss our current situation with regard to the RDC program. Mr. Michaels supported completely our understanding of the desire of Chairman Mahon that the Agency terminate the funding of this program at the earliest possible date. (See []'s Memorandum for the Record for details.)

7. (Unclassified - GLC) Talked with Representative Bradford Morse (R., Mass.) re his letter to the Director inviting him to meet with Members of Congress for Peace through Law on the subject of MIRV and MRV programs. I told the Congressman that the Director was on an extremely tight schedule and was attempting to limit his discussions of current ABM and MIRV situations to our Subcommittees and congressional committees with a jurisdictional interest in the issue. Congressman Morse said that he appreciated the Director's situation. Although he commented that another Agency official would be agreeable with them, he did not press the matter. However, he did ask that we send him a note on this.

CARL T. ROWAN

Intelligence Outpour in ABM Debate Damaging

The debate on the Safeguard anti-ballistics missile system has taken an irresponsible turn that could be very damaging to national security.

In the bitter battle over whether the ABM should win congressional approval, proponents and opponents are throwing once-highly-sensitive intelligence data around with reckless abandon.

With no more than a check with President Nixon, if that, Defense Secretary Melvin Laird has declassified considerable data in a poorly concealed plan to shock or frighten the Congress and the public into backing the proposed anti-missile system.

Opponents of the ABM, like Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., have accused the Pentagon of "selective" declassification of secret data simply to bolster the administration's case.

In retaliation, some members of Congress, especially the Senate, have argued that their pledges of secrecy are void. So they have been leaking secret testimony by the director of central intelligence, the secretary of state, and others who are privy to the most sensitive data on what Russia is doing and trying to do.

The result is that the intelligence agencies (CIA, Defense Intelligence Agency, National Security Agency) have become the pawns in a domestic power struggle.

No one asks these agencies how damaging to them, their agents, and their collection methods a certain "leak" or "declassification" might be. The rivals are throwing secrets around as though there is no tomorrow.

The Nixon administration began the "intelligence" battle by asserting that it had "new evidence" of Soviet deployment and projected deployment of the SS9 missile. Laird claimed certain "intelligence data" led him to conclude that Russia is trying to achieve a "first strike capability" — that is, the ability to deliver such a devastating first strike that the United States would be rendered powerless to retaliate.

Foes of the ABM quickly claimed that Nixon and Laird had created an "intelligence gap." The foes then leaked their own version of where the United States stands militarily vis-a-vis the Soviet Union.

A story in the June 1 New York Times carried specific figures that left no doubt that an ABM foe on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee had leaked data from a secret CIA briefing.

On June 11, again without so much as a "do you mind?" to the intelligence community, the Defense Department released a "white paper" that spells out in detail alleged Soviet developments that make the Safeguard system "mandatory."

The Pentagon said Russia is testing an advanced ABM weapon that can "loiter" in the atmosphere, eventually pick out an incoming missile and destroy it.

The Defense Department also claimed that recent Soviet tests in the Pacific indicate that Russia can develop and install multiple, independently targeted warheads (MIRV) in intercontinental missiles.

The "white paper" also revealed that whereas U.S. intelligence officials last fall predicted Russia would have 1,200 ICBMs operational by 1970, the Soviets already have more than that number in place or under construction. Of these, 230 are large SS9 missiles.

Some of the data presented by the Defense Department is fact, some of it dubious conclusions that are not shared by the intelligence community.

But the point that must be of great concern to the intelligence people is the extent to which the Russians have been made aware of what we know about their military posture.

We once kept tabs on China's nuclear progress just by monitoring certain broadcasts. One newspaper article speculating on that point alerted the Chinese and ever since it has cost the U.S. millions to gather data on Chinese nuclear weapons development that we once got free.

You can bet that the Soviet Union already has launched a fullscale program to cut off sources of information that American agencies have spent hundreds of millions of dollars to develop.

Hill Intelligence Report Disputes Administration on Red ABM Peril

By David Kraslow
Los Angeles Times

An unpublished Senate Foreign Relations Committee

staff document reveals a basic disagreement within the Government over whether the Soviet Union is going for a firststrike nuclear attack capability in its missile program.

This question is central to the issue of whether the United States should build an anti-ballistic missile system.

The document discloses that the United States Intelligence Board comprised of the top national security agencies, has never made a finding that the Soviet SS-9 intercontinental ballistic missile was deployed in order to develop a first-strike capability.

In Senate testimony on March 21, Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird said that the Soviets "are going for a first strike capability. They're going for our missiles and there's no doubt about that."

In addition to the statement on the intelligence board's assessment, the staff document makes other "assertions" concerning the Soviet missile program and related matters.

A copy of the document, based for the most part on information given the committee by Central Intelligence Agency Director Richard Helms on Soviet missile deployment and capabilities, has been obtained by The Times. Helms is chairman of the intelligence board as well.

The committee decided at a closed meeting yesterday against releasing the document. It voted instead to invite Laird to come before the committee to try to explain the differences between what Laird and other officials have been saying.

The document obviously was intended as a counter to the Nixon Administration's campaign to win support for its Safeguard ABM plan in the Senate, where the division on the issue is close. A bi-partisan majority of the 15-man Foreign Relations Committee is believed to be strongly opposed to deployment of an ABM system.

The document suggests distortion of secret intelligence data by unnamed Administration officials to gain public support for Safeguard.

"The intelligence information received by the committee does not accord in many important respects with the intelligence cited by certain officials of the Executive Branch and referred to in certain press reports," the document says.

"Because of the important part intelligence information has come to play in the debate on the proposed deployment of the Safeguard ABM system, and because the committee believes that the intelligence information made public has often been erroneous and thus has inadvertently created false impressions both within the Government and among the public generally, the committee believes it has a responsibility to attempt to clarify certain questions of fact."

In a "fact sheet" issued on March 14 to help demonstrate the need for Safeguard, the Pentagon said that "the Soviet ICBM program has not leveled off as we had hoped. In fact, if anything, it has accelerated, and they are continuing to deploy their big missiles."

The statement might leave the impression that Soviet missile deployment has increased. Yet the staff document says:

(1) We have known about tests of the SS-9, and about deployment of the SS-9, for five years.

(2) In the past two years the rate of deployment of these missiles has decreased and not increased.

(3) The number of SS-9 launchers discovered since November, 1968, represents an increase of less than 3 percent of the total number of SS-9 launchers which we know to be deployed.

1. (Confidential - JMM) At the Director's request called Mr. Sam Black, on the staff of the Democratic Study Group, in response to a request of the Group Chairman Representative Don Fraser for the Director to conduct a seminar of the Group on 1 July on "Estimating the External Threat." I told Mr. Black that the Director would not be available at that time and because of his heavy schedule could not forecast when he might be available. Moreover the subject involved was one on which we were in no position to even talk to a Group such as this. I said that estimating very much concerned the inner workings of the Agency and community and the Subcommittees to which we were primarily responsible regularly disapproved our going into these matters with other committees or groups. Black said he understood our problem and wondered if I had any alternative suggestion. He said Pete Scoville and Paul Warnke were participating and wanted to round out the program with someone experienced in the intelligence field. I suggested he might call Tom Hughes in State.

2. (Confidential - GLC) George Murphy, on the staff of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, called and asked if the estimate which was mentioned in this morning's newspaper contained Restricted Data or formerly Restricted Data. Murphy had the Kraslow and Grose articles from the daily papers somewhat confused, having the impression that an NIE had gotten into the hands of the Los Angeles Times. I straightened him out on this -- that according to the Kraslow column the document involved was an unpublished committee print prepared for the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Nevertheless, Murphy was concerned that there had obviously been a leak involving an NIE and pressed his question regarding Restricted Data and formerly Restricted Data material. I told him I would check on this and be back in touch with him.

of this type of material published in Germany at this time. I suggested that if he could get additional background information from the newspaper editor who published it he might be able to locate it in the Hoover Library of War and Peace at Stanford University. Haley was most appreciative of our effort.

14. (Unclassified - RW) Peggy Boose, in Mr. Zafra's office, BOB, called in connection with their 16 April 1969 request for views on a draft bill to amend the Military Personnel and Civilian Employees' Claims Act of 1964, as amended. I informed her that we had replied on 2 May 1969 and to let us know if she could not locate it.

OFFICE OF LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL

Thursday - 12 June 1969

1. (Unclassified - JMM) In response to a call from Jim Lowenstein, Senate Foreign Relations Committee staff, I gave him the membership by title of the United States Intelligence Board.
2. (Secret - JMM) Mr. Carl Marcy, Senate Foreign Relations Committee staff, called to say they could not understand how publication of the draft speech which Senator Fulbright gave the Director for comment could jeopardize intelligence sources, and would appreciate our documenting this position. See Memo of Conversation for details.
3. (Unclassified - JMM) Called Mr. Tom Braden, of the Los Angeles Times, as a follow up to his earlier call to the DDCI and explained that in addition to our briefings of various congressional committees under the guidance of the Agency Subcommittees, we kept the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy informed on matters of interest to them pursuant to provisions of the Atomic Energy Act requiring all Executive agencies to report to the Joint Committee on these matters.
4. (Unclassified - GLC) Miss Jacqueline Frazier, on the staff of the Senate Armed Committee, called and requested the names of the men who have served as Director of Central Intelligence and the period of their tenure. I provided her with a copy of the Agency pamphlet containing this information.
5. (Unclassified - GLC) Hand carried to Carl Marcy, Senate Foreign Relations Committee staff, the Director's letter to Chairman Fulbright concerning the draft speech entitled "Prejudice, Intelligence and the ABM."
6. (Secret - JGO) In response to a request from Mrs. Mary McLaughlin, Senate Foreign Relations Committee Staff, arrangements were made to forward the transcript of the Director's testimony before the Gore Subcommittee on International Organization and Disarmament Affairs of 23 April to the Committee for their use during working hours on Friday, 13 June and Monday, 16 June.
